Recovery of dystrophic iris and angle after transluminance radial keratotomy: a three-year follow-up. A patient with Batten disease and congenital glaucoma, who presented with bilateral advanced iris and angle atrophy, underwent uneventful radial keratotomy to add a refractive error and reduce the optic disc cupping. Two years after radial keratotomy (RK), the atrophy of the iris and angle with clear cornea remained stable. However, at the 3-year follow-up, there was a marked increase in the corneal diameter, an increase in the pupil diameter, and slight reduction of iris atrophy. Despite the decrease in the pupillary diameter by RK, the angle showed a marked atrophy at this time. At 29, he's got the look of a man who has seen more than his share of life's twists and turns. 'People at the beginning of their care are frightened of their care-givers, who are often frightened of the fact that they are frightened,' he says, and confesses that he wasn't. 'When you work in a job like nursing, and the reason you're there is to give life to people who are very sick and in need of care, you come to realise that the fear you feel is self-limiting. I've seen many wonderful, beautiful people give themselves up to despair because they feel they can't cope with it. That's a self-limiting idea which doesn't work. So I tried to make it work for me. I didn't become the stereotypical nurse until the last five years. I'm self-effacing.' But at school he was always thinking in the abstract rather than realising anything concrete. He skipped a grade because he couldn't keep up with his class, and when he went to university, he was repeatedly told that he didn't have enough knowledge to complete his degree. So he gave up on his studies and joined the army, travelling through India, Egypt and West

Long-term results of the malleolar fracture-dislocation of the ankle treated with Ilizarov external fixator. Retrospective study. To evaluate the long-term result of treatment of malleolar fracture-dislocations of the ankle with Ilizarov external fixator and to propose ideal treatment strategies. The most common cause of lateral ankle sprain is inversion injury during sports activity. Malleolar fractures, as an extension of fractures of the tibial plafond or distal tibia, are the most common fracture type after an ankle sprain. The malleolar fracture is the most commonly observed injury to the ankle, and it is one of the most demanding problems in traumatology. The type of treatment has been evolving over the past few decades. The aim of this study was to assess the long-term results of treating such fractures with Ilizarov external fixator. Eleven patients with malleolar fracture-dislocation of the ankle treated with Ilizarov external fixator were included in this study. The average age was 31.8 years (20 to 56 years) at the time of injury. The postoperative follow-up duration was an average of 68.1 months (54 to 97 months). The clinical assessments were performed using the Maaß 82138339de
