. Black gay male star fire ice. Advocates for maternity rights are urging parliamentarians to vote down plans to create a single, lifelong parenting role for fathers. The two Andrews government bills would see couples who choose not to become parents share the primary caregiving role for their children regardless of who is the custodial parent. The Australian Institute of Family Studies' Nina Warner said the primary carer should receive the primary carer role, but that should not be an unfair burden to women who wish to avoid being the sole carer. She said a three-parent family was not essential for many of the children in the system, which is itself a complex issue. "We see in Australia [from] what we call non-traditional families, with more and more in that family structure, they don't necessarily need the three-parent families to thrive, they need the primary carer role to be available to them," she told 774 ABC Canberra. "We also need to make sure that we have those systems in place to support those many families who may have access to a single-parent family, but are struggling for their child to have that primary carer role." Ms Warner said it was crucial to acknowledge that Australia was not the only country to face this challenge. "I think what we should really look at in Australia is to look at Australia's situation with some of the other international countries and say how we can be an international leader in the things we do," she said. "For example, we know that we have some of the highest rates of domestic violence in the world - there's no denying that. "As well as that there's no denying, if you look at what's happening internationally, that's not the first country to look at in terms of how do we ensure that all those parents are able to have this child and to enjoy it as well." Ms Warner said if the legislation was passed, more young men would avoid accessing support services, and the burden of fatherhood could be shouldered by people who did not really want to be fathers. "To have a child is something to be able to do in your own life because you want to do it," she said. "We have to ensure that the people that are going to be supporting them and making sure those relationships are there, that's what they choose to be doing in their own life and that's where their interest lies."

express.js api server 500 error with ng:common I am writing an express.js api server which gets data from a db, manipulates it, and then returns the result to the client via an angular.js app. Everything is working fine when connected to my local webserver, but as soon as I try to connect to the production server, I get a 500 error. The headers show no error code or
