Synopsis In the future, the United Kingdom is annexed by Germany and renamed "Hochland." An orphaned boy is befriended by Ulrich, a former Nazi leader, who is now self-declared king of Eureka, his principality. The children grow up together, Ulrich as Prince and Danny as his advisor. Both boys are deeply affected by the Holocaust—Ulrich learns that his family of Lilliputians has been annihilated, and Danny learns the true nature of his family's family. Although Danny is an aristocrat, he is granted no status, nor official title. Despite their association with the villainous Ulrich, Danny and Prince Ulrich are viewed with some sympathy in Eureka, though their remarkable friendship is not universally embraced. Reception The American Library Association called the book "a work that will require careful reading and discussion" and "an important story for children of all ages who may be confronting issues of intolerance in their own lives."
