You got completely surrounded by the bosses of the seven Elden Lords. You are no longer the Commander. You have lost your nerve and your way of the mountains, desert, and forest. You are falling into an eternal sleep. The gods have judged you. Are you ready for the gods' judgment? If you try hard enough, are you prepared to withstand their infinite hostility? Or are you just another reckless fool who can easily be contained within the four corners of his body? Answer now the question of your faith or you may be erased from the face of the earth. You are only one. What you will choose will be the story of your life. Will you be a legend who will live forever or will you be their victim? Do you have a future, or is your future gone? It is time to choose and live or die. The gods demand your decision. The game is also available for Android.

Q: What does it mean if a Polling call does not return immediately? What does it mean for a call to poll(...) to not return immediately, i.e. with a return code of -1? The documentation for poll(...) doesn't seem to mention it. A: I think you're misreading the documentation. When poll() returns, it changes from a "pseudo-signal" (that's the special case of returning -1, but the real error state) to the signalled error state. poll() actually returns -1 when an error is encountered. In no case does this function return a value when the timeout parameter has passed, and it does so without changing the value of errno to reflect the timeout condition. The errors are listed in the errno documentation. No error is denoted using 0. Q: Creating a class for format string I used to create DataFormat class for handle XML and StringFormat when creating UI strings format String for windows,i don't think it could be intelligent because it need to xpath and iterate all element to get correct value, in some case it need a dictonary to do it job, and i use to do like below import xml.etree.ElementTree as ET class DataFormat(object): def __init__(self,d,k=None,formatType=0): self.d=d self.k=k self.formatType=formatType def __call__(self,x,path="",key="",default=None): if self.formatType == 0: #Unparsed return x.get(path,default) elif self.formatType == 1: #Parsed return ET.tostring(x[path],

"...There are many horrible ways to develop cancer, but this is not among them." Over the last 5 years, we've seen more and more cases of lymphoma diagnosed in extremely rare kinds of animals. In the UK, the usual suspects for lymphoma are ones that infect your body's immune system. Examples include cats, dogs, marine mammals, and horses. Now our friends at the Australian Veterinary Association are warning that a very rare kind of giraffe is on the rise in Australia. They say that male giraffes have been found to be testing positive for the disease. Normally, these large land animals don't have to worry about a virus, because they have a specific kind of immune system that protects them. However, there is one very, very rare kind of giraffe that does deal with the equivalent of chicken pox - an animal version of this is known as shingles. Showing that sudden loss of feeling is a sign of shingles, says the AVMA And when it occurs in giraffes, AVMA says that they can then test positive for shingles. This side effect means that if giraffes have shingles or if they exhibit the loss of feeling
