The station is owned by University of Missouri–St. Louis, which is also its mother station; UMSL's St. Louis Public Television station, WUMR is its PBS member station. WVPL broadcasts a mostly local schedule. However, the station's program schedule includes three PBS member programs: the public affairs/education series Caution in the Use of Poisonous Insects, the educational nature series Antenna Jazz, and the children's series SeaQuest DSV. Syndicated programming on WVPL consists of classic sitcoms, reality series, dramas, and talk shows. History As an independent The station began broadcasting on September 12, 1954, as WVBH, although it first signed on the air on May 12, 1954, having signed on two months earlier on March 12. The station was originally broadcasting on Channel 15, as was WMAQ-TV, which signed on three months later on November 30 of that year. Both stations were licensed to the University of Missouri–St. Louis. In 1955, WVBH moved to Channel 8 (the allocation where VHF stations were allowed to use it to protect ABC's Cleveland and Pittsburgh stations), and changed its call sign to WUSL-TV. It became an independent station in 1961, when VHF stations were allowed to start using Channel 8 full-time; WUSL/WVBH would share channel 8 with WKTV-TV. WUSL/WVBH became an ABC affiliate in 1962, after having been a CBS affiliate for nearly the whole of its existence. WUSL/W
