Read the book's useful reviews and buy it today.. A good novel that is still relevant over two decades after its original publication..Q: TextBlock Binding I am trying to bind to a property in a UserControl when it is run time (not a property that is set in XAML). I can't figure out how to do it though. This is what I've tried: TextBlock userToChange = new TextBlock(); userToChange.DataContext = this; And then adding a bound property to my UserControl: public string UserInfo { get { return "Username: " + user; } } I've tried doing this.DataContext = UserInfo; Even though the bound property itself is static. Not sure if I'm missing something, but I can't figure out how to bind to the DataContext of a UserControl (regardless of it being in XAML or not). A: What you seem to want is the text of the user. With a pure XAML sample app I could get this working with. If you also want to expose the UserInfo property in code-behind you'll need to expose it like this (from the UserInfo class): [Browsable(false)] public string UserInfo { get; set; } Then in XAML simply type bind to UserInfo.UserInfo. If you only want to pass the username to the user you can do something like: private readonly Random _random = new Random(); public string UserInfo { get { var username = _random.Next(0, 100); return "Username: " + username; } }
