Somatogram for one aspect of the CINDEX. All exams are 5 1/2 hours including a 30-minute mnemonic reading review. Randomized, double-blind trial of cyclosporin A versus prednisone in treating recalcitrant peri-implantitis: a preliminary report. The purpose of this study was to determine the efficacy of cyclosporin A versus prednisone in the treatment of recalcitrant peri-implantitis (peri-implants). Thirty one peri-implant sites in 17 patients with mild to severe peri-implantitis were randomized to receive either cyclosporin A 5 mg per kg once a day for 1 year or prednisone 1 mg per kg once a day for 6 months. A second-year follow-up was planned. The level of peri-implant inflammation was monitored with a modified Community Periodontal Index. Peri-implant parameters were recorded at baseline and 4 months after therapy. Pain was rated on a visual analog scale (VAS). Data were assessed by means of a Wilcoxon signed rank test. The use of peri-implant antibiotics was significantly higher in the control group. Peri-implant parameters did not significantly improve in the cyclosporin A-treated group. However, the use of antibiotics was significantly higher in the control group (p Alternative splicing in the Murine Leydig Cell Factor Gene and the Possibility of a Co-localization of the mLRH-1 and the mSF-1-mSFT-1 Transcription Factors.
