President Obama told CBS News that he thinks that if President Trump “were to pursue a military option, there would be a cost and consequences for the United States.” That is to say that if the President orders a scenario in the region. This is because North Korea can actually handle such a situation. Do you see any window for a diplomatic solution? President Obama: I think that when it comes to North Korea, the window is closing. I think that if the United States were to pursue a military option, there would be a cost and consequences for the United States. I think that North Korea is a country that has nuclear weapons. It has a long track record of violating international law, assassinating the families of foreign diplomats. And the fact is, that its conventional forces have grown in a way that means that if somebody attacks North Korea, North Korea has the ability to actually respond with conventional weapons.

And at that point, it's hard to predict what their response would be.

This is a very serious situation, and if you look at the track record of what's happened over the years, North Korea has mounted hundreds of tests of these nuclear weapons. They have a record of missile testing that would be considered reckless. And the question is do we take them at their word, and just say, “We’re going to play tough, and we’re going to stand by and if they violate their obligations and start testing nuclear weapons, we’re going to take them at their word, and we’re going to respond with a military strike”? Because in many ways, if they are
