can be used to generate invoice with various reports and print options.... ..it allows you to collect all your financial data to create an invoice to your clients. InvoiceAxe is... a tool to create invoices for a number of different software vendors, including Windows, Microsoft Office, MSN, as well as other PC utilities, such as Adobe Photoshop and Autodesk Maya. Simple and intuitive interface InvoiceAxe is a simple and intuitive application, which you can get started with a few clicks. All you need to do is select one of the provided templates and add values. If you want to work with your own invoice templates, you can do so using an embedded XSLT editor. Multiple databases InvoiceAxe can export data into multiple different databases, such as Microsoft SQL Server and Access databases. You can also perform queries and export to a text file or CSV format. In addition, you can print the invoice and save it to PDF. The main window only acts like a portal to all other areas, which open up in individual windows you can arrange in the interface. Sadly, arranging needs to be done manually, with no preset options in the Window menu. The Setup and Basic Inputs menus are the places you want to visit in case data needs to be added or changed. Sooner or later you end up here, with options that cover items, customers, sales persons, transports, payment and delivery modes, payment modes, and a lot more. Issue reports and export data As mentioned above, each utility runs in its own menu. As frustrating as it may be to work with a lot of windows, it helps with data gathering and viewing multiple areas at a time. Requirement fields are mostly the same, and allow the application to be used in different types of business. Invoicing might not involve so much writing, but it can take the same amount of time. This is because values created earlier need to be selected from different drop-down menus, or numerical values filled in. Moreover, a built-in designer lets you create custom invoice and report templates to use for your company. Every bit of info you
